

QUAL EVIDENCE

— Different platforms. A shared tension

Douyin comments

English-Language Fashion Discourse

"It's so nice to see someone going all out with outfits in a world of 'clean girl' and 'quiet luxury.'"

Polish is still desirable. Sameness is not.

Fauxmoi

"She just doesn't look that comfortable either."

Aspirational style loses power when it feels performed rather than lived.

"I love the creator's unconventional way of thinking. Living inside ordinary expectations every day would be so boring."

Individuality and freedom are part of the aspiration.

Aspiration becomes more shareable when people can add their own version to the story.

Across both platforms, audiences still want aspiration—but they engage most when it feels expressive, lived-in.

Key Insight — Aspirational Content Needs An Entry Point

Passive Viewing

"Her life looks beautiful."

To Participatory Recognition

"This could be my version, too."

"Here is what this would look like in my city."

"This is the kind of life I am becoming."

Audience don't want a more perfect version of Yujia's NY life.
They want a way to locate themselves inside it.
— through their city, culture, style and everyday reality.

Yujia's feed shouldn't function as a finished lifestyle to admire.
It should function as an open cross-cultural imaginarium.
— a world that audiences can enter, interpret, and extend.

The growth opportunity is not more aspiration. It is more permission to participate.

Audience Overview — Two Platforms, Two Entry Points

The same creator promise travels differently across Douyin and Instagram.

Douyin — Core Audience

Role
Current engagement engine.

AUDIENCE
China-based viewers using New York content to imagine a freer, more expressive urban life.

- emotionally accessible
- saveable
- relatable

THEIR ENTRY POINT
Mood, relatability, and saveable lifestyle details. "I want this life too."

Instagram — Growth Audience

Role
Global expansion space.

AUDIENCE
Cross-cultural, English-speaking citystyle audiences seeking inspiration beyond copy-paste aesthetics.

- cross-cultural
- visual identity
- participatory

THEIR ENTRY POINT
Visual identity, cultural comparison, and prompts invite their city version.

One creator. Two platforms. One shared promise: aspiration with room for recognition.
